At end 2004, 86% of the National Debt carried a fixed rate of interest as compared with 76% at end 2003. The high level of fixed interest debt is a result of the policy of locking in long term borrowing at historically low levels of interest, thus protecting the Exchequer against the effects of rising interest rates, and also the rundown in

Synopsis chapter 13 and 14 gapessays

Once referred to as the Common Market and later known as the European Community (EC), the European Union (EU) is a tariff-free group of European countries that have joined together to enjoy the benefits of barrier-free trade. Formed in 1992, the single economic community requires member nations to subscribe to the same monetary standard, the elimination of immigration and customs controls
